Hired to attend Meeting.

While engaged, a few weeks since, in was forcibly struck one evening with the thought, that but few who have passed the mercian of life repent of heir sins and are saved by grace thro' faith in Jesus Christ. Before me were a large number of aged persons, who were yet in the gall of bitterness and under the strong bonds of iniquity.

The next evening, to my surprise, an old man aged seventy years begged the prayers of God's people. After a season of prayer, he rose with trembling limbs and said, "I am now 70 years of age, and have spent all of that time in sinning against God and man. I have indulged in profanity, and have loved the intoxicating cup, and now am near my end, and justly merit the wrath of God. All of you must have been astonished the first evening I came to hear the gospel preached. This is not what I came for at first. Neighbor T. invited me to come to meeting. I de-clined. He finally said he would give me five dollars at the end of two weeks if I would come regularly during that time, and should say that I was not benefitted. One week," said he, "is not yet gone, and thank God," (with streaming eyes) "the debt is paid. I should soon have been in hell, had I not been hired to come within the influence of the Spirit of God." He sat down. You can imagine the stillness that pervaded the meeting .-All eyes filled with tears. After a few moments the silence was broken by the voice of his wife, who arose and said, "I have been an opposer of religion all my days; but, thank the Lord, my husband was hired to come to meeting, and I was persuaded to accompany him. I trust that the Lord for Christ's sake has pardoned my Power of Pilgrims' Progress.

In the late Colporteur Convention at Charleston, S. C. a writer says, "The incidental good to the colored race from this enterprise, was illustrated by statements from Agents and Colporteurs. So far as they can read, there appears to be no obstacle to the circulation of the Society's publications among them, and thousands of Tracts and books make their way to their hands. In many instances they are read in their hearing to their spiritual profit. When one of them was listening to the reading of them was listening to the reading of Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, and following Christian on his way from the city of Destruction, and his escape from the slough of Despond, he interrupted the reader with the exclamation, "He's safe through, is he, massa? A missionary in India was descending in a boat the river Gunduck, when he saw near a village a group of Hindoos seated on the ground. One of the number was reading: the rest were deeply attentive. Curious to witness this scene to his surprise, he found that the book around which the circle was gathered was the Holy Scriptures. When he made himself known, the reader manifested the greatest joy. He immediately saked many explanations, and while the missionary remained in the vicinity, he often sought for him and had many serious interviews with him. His faith was weak, and he had not sufficient strength to make a profession. But subsequently he visited the missionary many times at his station, travelling a considerable distance. The result was his entire and sincere conversion. Someand feverish heat from the Scalp.

But whence came this copy of the ly another missionary, passing down the same river, had landed and distributed a few volumes containing the four Gospels and the Acts. This man, of a naturally thoughtful disposition, and already disgusted with the idolatry in which he had been brought up, found in the sacred volume a foundation for a nicated to his brother the knowledge of the Saviour whom he had found, so this Hindoo to his friends; and the volume, apparently cast upon the winds, was a happy acquaintance with the way of salvation. — Macedonian.

Curiosities of Bible Literature.—It is a curious fact that there are about five hundred verses in Mathew's Gospel has are also in Mark's; more than three Mark, and about one hundred and twenty that are also in Matthew. Nearly one half of the Gospel by Matthew is to be found in Mark, and more than one third of the Gospel by Luke is to be found in Mark and Matthew.

TRUE CHRISTIANS.—Christians in Greenland very soldom, if ever, absent themselves from public worship on account of the weather. When it is so cold that their breath freezes and forms ances, men, women, and children, arough snow and ice, and storm, to ne house of prayer.
